We look forward to seeing you in the classroom in September 2026!

Is Media Studies GCSE hard?

The Media Studies GCSE has a pretty high pass rate, and much of this is down to the fact that students enjoy the lessons so much, and revision doesn't feel like revision.

Media Studies classes are generally pretty lively, with lots of discussions, projects and presentations – it's a fun class to be in. This, coupled with the coursework (NEA) element making up 30% of the grade, means that most students who take the course don't find it to be a difficult subject.

Another great thing about the GCSE is that it ties in well with other subjects, like English, Religious Studies, History and Geography. This is all to say that taking the course will help you with other subjects and vice versa!

What is involved in Film Studies?

The Film Studies course will be weaved into the Media Studies course. The skills that you have gained from Media will be applied to the six films that you will study and so these two subjects complement each other perfectly!

Is there coursework involved?

The coursework (NEA) element makes up 30% of the grade enabling you to be creative throughout the course. You will have the opportunity to write your own Screenplay and Shooting Script.
